JULY 13, 2009

CARMODY TO LEAD NEW HOSPITAL

Marty Carmody

The search is over. The board of directors for Bellevue Medical Center has selected Marty Carmody as the new chief executive officer. Carmody has been part of the executive team at The Nebraska Medical Center for 15 years, most recently serving as executive director of Support Services. He will be transitioning to the new role over the next month.

“I am honored to have the opportunity to serve on behalf of employees, physicians, the board of directors, shareholders and the patients Bellevue Medical Center will serve,” said Carmody of the appointment.

Carmody has earned a reputation among employees, physicians and vendors as an innovative and inclusive leader, who is dedicated to quality and efficiency but places just as much emphasis on connecting with people.

“We are very excited for Marty. His extensive experience prepares him for the opportunity,” said Glenn Fosdick, president and CEO of The Nebraska Medical Center. “His enthusiasm and an open style of leadership will be an asset as we bring Bellevue Medical Center to fruition.”

Carmody and Chief Financial Officer Bill Dinsmoor will be working on a transition plan for his current areas of responsibility within The Nebraska Medical Center.

“We are happy to have Marty joining the team at Bellevue Medical Center” said Dinsmoor. “There has been a lot of great work and accomplishments to this point. This decision brings us yet one step closer to realizing our goal of providing high quality care in a community hospital setting for the people of Bellevue.”

Construction continues on Bellevue Medical Center and is expected to wrap up in October in preparation for a spring 2010 opening.
